With new programs, new facilities, a new trustee, new faculty, staff, and administrators, a new long-range plan, and a new facilities master plan, Randolph Community College is marching boldly forward, answering the call to “provide quality education, training, and workforce development to meet the needs of our students and our community.”

Working closely with our many friends in the community, we strive daily to improve life and expand opportunities for the people of Randolph County. # Randolph Community College's 45th Anniversary Celebration

On the weekend of Sept. 14 and 15, 2007, Randolph Community College held its 45th anniversary celebration with events for college founders, first faculty and staff members, first graduates, alumni, and the public.

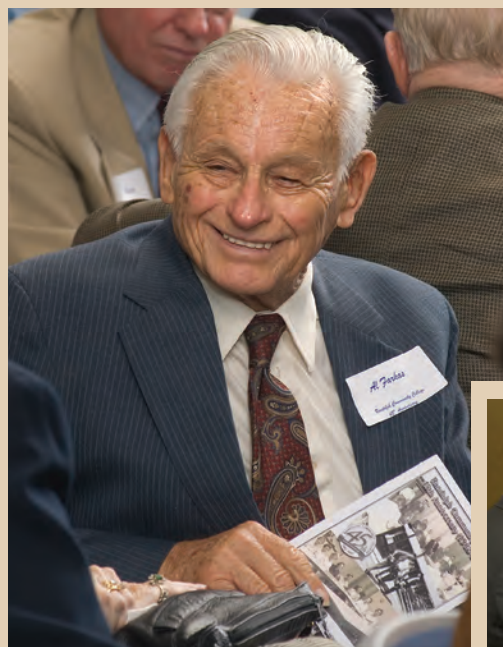

On Friday evening, Greg Hyslop, a visiting artist at RCC from 1982-1983, presented a jazz concert and the first graduates (1963-1964) of the Randolph Industrial Education Center were recognized and honored.

Saturday morning, a ceremony was held to recognize and honor dignitaries, including RIEC founders, the Women's Advisory Committee (1962), first directors/associate director, first staff members and first faculty when the College opened in 1962.

The musical group "Timeless" played to kick off Saturday afternoon events for the public, which included a College Fair with a variety of activities including demonstrations in various program areas, mini-classes, children's activities, a pottery sale, and displays of vintage cars, restored Harley Davidson motorcycles, and Kyle Petty's #45 race car.

College Grants 2007-2008

Language Consortium: Gift in kind as part of Workforce Innovation in Regional Economic Development (WIRED), for teleconferencing equipment.

RCC joined Surry Community College, Rockingham Community College, and Montgomery Community College in partnering with Davidson County Community College to create a Global Languages and Cultural Students Consortium. RCC received the equipment necessary to allow RCC students to participate in videoconferencing classes in languages including Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, and Arabic.

North Carolina Rural Center: $5,056 for a Community Innovation Grant from the North Carolina Rural Center.

The grant helped RCC present its first Mid-Life Entrepreneur's Boot Camp, an in-depth, five-week course geared to the mid-life person who is considering starting his or her own business. The first course was offered at RCC's Archdale Center, led by Project Director Lonnie Hamm. Eight budding entrepreneurs graduated from the camp in August.

2007-2008 College Highlights

New Curriculum Program

Enrollment was strong for RCC's new Healthcare Management Technology associate degree program introduced in fall 2007. The curriculum is designed to fill the need for managers in areas of insurance, office operations, and medical records for physician's offices, clinics, long-term care facilities, and hospitals. The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts a 27% growth in North Carolina jobs in the area of medical and health services managers through 2014.

New Vice Presidents

RCC welcomed two new vice presidents in 2007-2008. Jerry L. Simpson rejoined Randolph Community College as vice president for student services. Simpson previously worked for Randolph Community College from 1985 to 1990 as evening director. He was most recently interim vice president for student services at Rockingham Community College. Simpson's education includes a bachelor of arts degree in English from Gardner-Webb University and a master of education in guidance and counseling from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Also, this year Anne B. Hockett assumed the role of vice president for instructional services. Hockett came to RCC after 19 years of service at Guilford Technical Community College, most recently as division chair. She started out in the community college system, earning a diploma in surgical technology and an associate degree in nursing from Sandhills Community College, then went on to earn a bachelor's degree in health occupation education from North Carolina State University and a master's degree in education from East Carolina University.

2007 Distinguished Service Award

Charles W. McCary Sr., who has been called "the father of Randolph Community College," was honored posthumously as the recipient of the 2007 RCC Board of Trustees Distinguished Service Award. Accepting on his behalf were Charles W. McCary Jr. and his wife, Susan.

In 1957 McCary Sr., as a member of the North Carolina State Board of Education, paved the way for Randolph County to be selected as a site for one of the early Industrial Education Centers. He worked closely with Dallas Herring and Wade Martin in Raleigh to see the Industrial Education Centers established that eventually evolved into the 58 community colleges we have today.

Leadership

McCrary was the son of Acme-McCrary Hosiery Mill's founder, D. B. McCrary. McCrary was a service-oriented individual and held many prestigious positions, such as chairman of the board of Acme-McCrary Corporation, chairman of the board of Marlowe Manufacturing Company of Florence, S.C., vice president of Sapona Manufacturing Company, chairman of the Asheboro Board of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, chairman of the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, president of Asheboro Public Library, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and president of the Asheboro Rotary Club.

Photography Awards

Two second-year Photographic Technology students from Randolph Community College, three RCC graduates, and instructor Ashley Fetner brought home awards in March 2008 from the Professional Photographers of North Carolina Annual Print Competition Convention in Raleigh.

Meghan Barrett of Graham and Rafael Medel of Winston-Salem, both second-year students in the Portrait Studio Management concentration of the Photographic Technology program, won Gold Corner awards.

Graduates from 2007 who won awards were Matt Carlson, Gold Corner award; Erin Arsenault, Gold Corner award and Court of Honor Ribbon; and Laura Wessell, Gold Corner award, Court of Honor Ribbon and 3rd Place-Pets and Animals. Portrait photography instructor Ashley Fetner also won a Gold Corner award and a Court of Honor Ribbon.

ADDY Awards

RCC Advertising & Graphic Design student Matt Taylor of Asheboro won two gold ADDY Awards during ceremonies held by the Ad Club of the Triad in April. Taylor won Gold ADDYs in Elements of Advertising/Logo and Sales Promotion/Point of Purchase categories for student members. He designed a logo and point of purchase materials for Twinings.

In addition, several RCC students and graduates won Silver ADDYs. Ariel Vernon, an Advertising & Graphic Design student from Seagrove, won in the Elements of Advertising/Illustration category for a holiday card featuring an illustration of the College's mascot, an armadillo. Joseph Ritch of Asheboro, also an Advertising & Graphic Design student, won a Silver award in the Non-Traditional Advertising category. Thomas Grimes of Siler City and Kevin Starr of Greensboro, both graduates from this program, won a Silver award for their collaboration on a poster in the Collateral Material/Poster category.

Taylor also won a Silver award for Sales Promotion/Packaging for a Twinings package and another Silver award in the Mixed Media category for a campaign for the Center for Creative Leadership that he helped create as one of the art directors while he was interning at the Woodbine Agency of Winston-Salem.

Many other RCC students participated in the preparation for the ADDYs, beginning with the call for entries, judging, and staging of the gala. With over 60,000 entries annually, the ADDY Awards are the world's largest and arguably toughest advertising competition. The American Advertising Federation conducts the ADDY Awards through its 200 member advertising clubs and 15 districts.

2nd RCC Biotech Camp

Eighteen ninth-graders attending a four-day Biotechnology Basics Camp at Randolph Community College in June were treated to a visit from the BioNetwork Mobile Lab. The BioNetwork Mobile Laboratory - called the BioNetworkBus - is the nation's only mobile laboratory designed to offer accelerated laboratory-based biotechnology training to community college students in remote areas across the state. The bus also takes specialized equipment and experienced faculty straight to company sites for incumbent worker training.

Students attending the Biotech Camp were rising ninth-graders from Randolph Early College High School. This is the second year for the event, which is designed to introduce students to biotechnology as a career choice.

Randolph Early College High School

RCC added a 6,384-square-foot modular building to its campus during the 2007-08 school year to house students from Randolph Early College High School, which began its third year of classes on the RCC Campus in August. The building, which was funded by the Randolph County Commission, houses five large classrooms including a science lab and office space. RECHS juniors are taking classes in the new building, while freshmen and sophomores continue to take their high school classes on the second floor of the J. W. "Willie" Plummer Vocational/Technical Center.

RECHS has been very successful with higher than normal retention rates and exceptional end-of-year testing scores. In fact, the school was one of the six best performing high schools in the state of North Carolina.

RECHS is one of 33 Early College High Schools in North Carolina and one of Randolph County's six high schools. In this partnership between Randolph County Schools and Randolph Community College, students earn their high school diploma AND up to two years of transferable college credit or an associate's degree in four/five years. Benefits include financial savings -- tuition, fees and insurance are paid by Learn and Earn money; books and transportation are provided by Randolph County Schools.

Building Trades Center

A $72,000 project to renovate part of the College's Building 13 was completed in March 2008. The new Building Trades Center contains two new Continuing Education classrooms, a lab for Taxidermy classes, a lab for heating and air conditioning (HVAC) classes, and an entrance/student lounge area. The building also was made handicap accessible. The College's Electrical/Electronics curriculum students helped with the renovations, along with the College's maintenance staff.

LaVerne Williams, chair of the Randolph County Board of Education, cuts the ribbon for the new Early College High School building at RCC.

Planning

RCC completed a Long Range Plan, a Master Facilities Plan, and updated its Strategic Plan during the 2007-08 school year. In November 2007, the North Carolina Community College System asked each of the 58 community colleges to develop a Long Range Plan to determine how we can best meet our community's needs through 2012. An RCC committee studied demographic data, surveyed college staff about areas of potential growth and enrollment projections, and conducted three external listening forums to gather community input. The Long Range Plan was submitted in mid-December and formed the basis for the Master Facilities Plan, which was completed in late spring and adopted by the Board of Trustees in July.

The Master Facilities Plan identified four top priorities:

- 1) Purchasing and renovating the Klaussner Furniture plant on Industrial Park Avenue for use by the College;
- 2) Renovating the spaces in current buildings that would be vacated when departments/classrooms move to the Klaussner building;
- 3) Constructing a Welcome/Student Services Center near the entrance to the Asheboro Campus; and
- 4) Building an indoor firing range at the Emergency Services Training Center.

Campus Safety

In response to incidents of campus violence across the nation, the Report of the Campus Safety Task Force presented to North Carolina Attorney General Roy Cooper, and RCC's commitment to keep our community college campus as safe as possible, RCC added a new position during the 2007-08 school year — director of college safety and emergency preparedness.

This position delivers safety and security services which includes the development, implementation, and administration of programs that assist the campus community in maintaining order, and/or improving the personal safety of the students, faculty, staff, guests and property of the College. Since being hired, the new director has conducted various training classes for faculty and staff, updated various emergency plans, and has worked on implementing a mass notification system for the campus in case of emergencies. That system includes Cruiser Alert, a part of the College's Campus Cruiser online service for students and faculty/staff. After signing up for Cruiser Alert, users can be notified by e-mail or a text message via cell phones or pagers. The service has been used once this school year, when a tornado warning was issued for Randolph County in August. An indoor/outdoor speaker system with a siren/voice message is also being planned.

Also key RCC employees, including the Board of Trustees chairman, the senior leadership team, deans and others, underwent training on the National Incident Management System (NIMS), a comprehensive national approach to incident management, and completed a Multi-Hazard Emergency Planning for Schools workshop.

Academic Excellence Recognized

RCC students Permelia Ann Cox of Climax and Tony R. Garner of Asheboro were among 116 students from 58 community colleges who received special recognition at the North Carolina Community College System Academic Excellence Award Luncheon in Raleigh in April. More than 600 community college staff, students and supporters, including about 15 legislators, gathered to recognize the outstanding accomplishments of selected students.

Both Cox, who was a student in the Office Systems Technology curriculum at RCC, and Garner, who studied Machining Technology, graduated in May.

RCC will renovate a former Klaussner plant on Industrial Park Avenue to provide more classrooms and lab space.

Dacia Murphy-Price represented teaching excellence at RCC.

“Mamie is very patient and thorough... She always gives the history of whatever it is you’re trying to do and why you do it a certain way. She leaves no doubt as to the correct way something should be handled.”

Excellence in Teaching and Staff Awards

Dacia Murphy-Price

Dacia Murphy-Price, English instructor and coordinator of English, Literature, Communications and Foreign Language classes at RCC, won the College’s 2007 Excellence in Teaching Award. Since joining RCC’s faculty in January 1999, Murphy-Price has had extraordinary success as a teacher, creating a classroom environment that results in motivated students and successful learning.

She has earned the respect and admiration of the students and her fellow instructors. “She is the consummate professional, teaching her students in a way that addresses their individual needs and learning styles and connecting with them on a personal basis,” said one colleague. A student noted, “(She) knows exactly how to teach her students in a calm and understanding manner... which allows them to grasp the concept and feel as if they have accomplished something they thought they could never do.”

Murphy-Price earned a bachelor of arts in English from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, graduating Magna Cum Laude. She also obtained her master of arts in English from UNCG.

Mamie Maness

When Mamie Maness retired as manager of RCC’s accounting department in 2001, she was lauded for her tireless and meticulous bookkeeping and the years of exceptional financial audits the college had enjoyed. During her retirement, she was recommended for and worked as a consultant at Cleveland and Roanoke Chowan community colleges.

Then in March 2006, RCC experienced the need for her financial expertise again. She came out of retirement to work full time at RCC for 16 months, helping to correct some audit problems, identifying the need for and hiring additional staff in the business office, and helping to coach those staff members to work efficiently and independently. Maness retired for the second time in July 2007 but continues to come to RCC as needed to lend her financial expertise. And her expertise has again been in demand from the financial departments at other community colleges in the state.

Staff award recipients are chosen based on their commitment and contributions to the mission of the institution and the North Carolina Community College System; consistent, excellent performance on the job, exhibiting unselfish devotion to duty far and above normal requirements and significant contribution to the advancement of the institution and its students; initiative, innovation and leadership in the workplace; responsible, efficient use of time, money, technology, personnel and/or other resources; attention to professional and personal development; and willingness to share time and expertise. Maness exhibits all these qualities and more and was an obvious choice for RCC’s 2007 Excellence in Staff award.

Randolph Community College Builds Leaders

First Student Leadership Academy Held

Fourteen RCC students attended the College's first Student Leadership Academy in April. They were chosen to participate based on a competitive process which considered leadership experience, leadership potential, a letter of reference, and submission of a portfolio.

Dr. Robert C. Keys, a popular speaker on the topic of leadership and president of Rockingham Community College, was the keynote speaker. Another highlight was a presentation on leadership in difficult situations by James E. Coleman Jr., professor of the practice of law at Duke University.

The Academy offered students the opportunity to learn about leadership from local and regional leaders. Participants also had the chance to identify their own leadership styles and learn how to use that information effectively. Students created a personal portfolio, which was reviewed by area human resource professionals who gave the students feedback to assist in developing more professional polish.

Student leadership development was one of several priority initiatives identified by Dr. Robert Shackleford when he became president of RCC in January 2007.

RCC Student Wins Statewide Leadership Award

Also in April, Winter Kye Archibald of Asheboro, an Associate in Arts (College Transfer) student at RCC, was awarded the Dr. Michael Taylor Award at a conference of the N4CSGA, a statewide group of student government associations from North Carolina community colleges.

The award is given to a student whose work has enhanced the growth of others in the organization, increased teamwork and personal involvement, and helped the organization reach its potential. This student exemplifies a desire to lead by serving others in the community, on their campus, or in the community college.

Archibald served as secretary of the Student Government Association at RCC, was a member of the Phi Theta Kappa honor society, and co-founder and president of the Campus Crusaders, a student Bible study group at RCC. She also served as chairman of the SGA special events committee.

Cole Completes Statewide Leadership Program

Michelle Cole, dean of Basic Skills at RCC, completed the North Carolina Community College Leadership Program during the 2007-08 school year. The program is designed to develop future college leaders through a series of workshops and seminars covering topics such as diversity, conflict resolution, and leading through change. Participants are selected through a competitive application process.

Cole has worked with the college since 2006. She was director of the Human Resources Development program at RCC before taking on the leadership of Basic Skills.

Richard Petty attended the groundbreaking for the Richard Petty Education Center in August.

Richard Petty Education Center

Seven-time NASCAR champion Richard Petty was on hand in early August for the groundbreaking ceremony for the $1.5 million Richard Petty Education Center at RCC. The 20,000-square-foot center will provide training for students who are interested in becoming world-class automobile mechanics and auto body repair technicians. It doubles the space currently used by RCC's Automotive Systems Technology and Autobody Repair programs.

The slate of dignitaries attending the ceremony included North Carolina Senator Jerry Tillman, Representative Harold Brubaker, Randolph County Board of Commissioners Chairman Harold Holmes, and RCC Board of Trustees Chairman Jim Campbell.

"I feel honored to be able to be here and be a part of this," said Petty. "You can't just be a backyard mechanic anymore," he continued, "you have to have that technical knowledge and to get that, you have to go to school."

Dr. Robert Shackleford Jr., RCC president, described Petty as a "native son of Randolph County who represents the winning spirit and professional excellence that will mark our faculty, students, and programs that we house in this facility that will carry his name."

The building, which the College hopes to have completed by fall 2009, will include 10 automotive bays, an automotive lab, welding area, and paint booths.

University Center of Randolph County

RCC President Robert Shackleford was joined by the presidents of Pfeiffer University, Greensboro College, and Salem College in August to sign an agreement to establish The University Center of Randolph County on RCC's Asheboro Campus. Operating under the University Center banner, the four-year institutions will offer courses on the campus of RCC that will enable students in particular disciplines to complete baccalaureate degrees.

Participating in the signing ceremony with Dr. Shackleford were presidents Dr. Craven Williams of Greensboro College, Dr. Chuck Ambrose of Pfeiffer University, and Dr. Susan Pauly of Salem College. Pfeiffer is offering a bachelor's degree in elementary education; Greensboro College is offering courses for criminal justice students; and Salem College will focus on business administration courses. The courses are being offered at a significantly reduced tuition rate.

Randolph Community College Gives Back

RCC students, faculty and staff gave back to the community at various times throughout the school year.

Beta Theta Rho, RCC's chapter of Phi Theta Kappa international honor society for two-year colleges, is active in community service projects. Activities of PTK include sponsoring two book sales each year to provide books for Africa and sponsoring a spring prom for the RCC Compensatory Education students each year.

Students in RCC's chapter of Phi Beta Lambda, a national organization for students preparing to pursue business occupations, collected over 2,000 cans of food to donate to Christians United Outreach Center last November, prior to the holidays.

The RCC Student Nurse Association also held a bake sale during the school year to raise money for cancer research.

The Student Government Association conducted a fundraiser for the Foundation for Children with Cancer in March. Yellow ribbons were sold for $1 each in the Armadillo Café to help support families and children with cancer.

Members of Campus Crusaders, a campus club for Christian fellowship, have volunteered time for Habitat for Humanity including a weekend mission trip to West Virginia.

RCC's Armadillo Trackers, the staff/faculty fundraising team for the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life event, earned over $4,000 last year for cancer research with events like bake sales and raffles.

Continuing Education Achievements

Confined Space Entry Operations course for Bomb Squad Technicians.

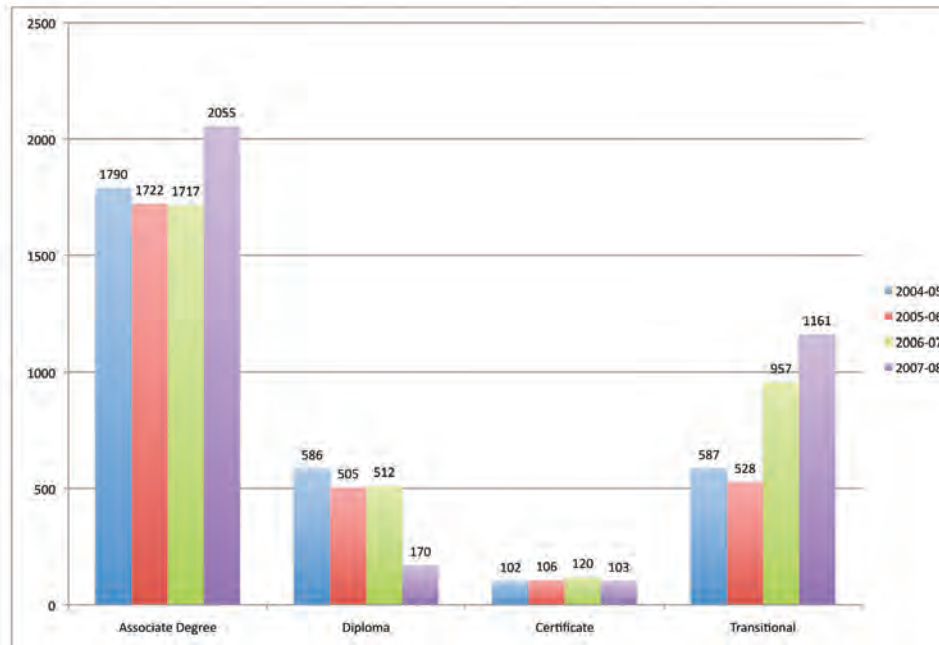

- In response to a goal to strengthen the Archdale Center and the Emergency Services Training Center and expand their programs to better serve their communities, the number of Human Resource Development classes and students at the Archdale Center increased by 22% over the previous year (from 27 classes/154 students in 2006-07 to 33 classes/188 students in 2007-08). Also, the overall number of courses offered at the ESTC rose from 272 to 376, or 38%.
- One of those courses, an 18-hour Confined Space Entry Operations course for Bomb Squad Technicians was offered at the Emergency Services Training Center for three days in March. The course was requested by SBI bomb technician B. W. Collier after he read an article in a trade magazine about a police department in Florida that was fined by OSHA after a bomb technician was injured in a response that involved a confined space. A total of 14 bomb technicians from the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation, Winston-Salem Police Department, Gaston County Police Department, Wilkes County Sheriff's Office and the Concord Police Department participated in the training.
- In fall 2007, the Continuing Education division added a new Web Programming and Development certificate program to prepare graduates for careers in Web programming. The certificate program can be completed in 12 months if students maintain a minimum of 15 hours a week in classes. Students in this program learn terminology, HTML, Java, database skills, and are introduced to different packages such as Dreamweaver and Paint Shop Pro. In addition, they learn to develop dynamic content and cascading style sheets necessary to deliver rich and interactive Web content.
- The Small Business Center conducted a 150-hour/25-day Mid-Life Entrepreneur's Boot Camp at the Archdale Center. The camp was funded through a 50% Rural Center grant with in-kind RCC matching funds. Eight students graduated from the Boot Camp on Aug. 14. The Boot Camp graduates have formed a peer mentor support group to continue to assist each other in their own business launches.
- RCC's Small Business Center is one of six SBCs to receive part of a $1.6 million U.S. Department of Labor grant through the North Carolina Department of Commerce, Division of Workforce Development. The grant is designed to assist dislocated workers in rural areas to develop entrepreneurship skills. In addition to the local workforce development boards, and the local JobLink Career Centers, other key partners include the N.C. Rural Economic Development Center and N.C. REAL Enterprises.

Foundation President

The Randolph Community College Foundation assisted RCC and its students in a variety of ways during the 2007-2008 year. We awarded over $100,000 in scholarships to Curriculum students and over $10,000 in Continuing Education scholarships. We also provided funding to students who had unexpected financial emergencies that endangered their continuing in school. These kinds of assistance make it possible for students to obtain an education and upgrade skills that ultimately lead to successful and fulfilling careers.

In addition to scholarships and direct support to RCC's programs, we helped launch the new Healthcare Management Technology program by funding the lead instructor's salary for the first year. We also funded an image study to help the College better market itself within Randolph County. The Foundation also approved funding for renovations to the Armadillo Café and Student Lounge to provide a more modern, convenient, and attractive atmosphere in which students may eat, study, and socialize.

During 2007-2008, the Foundation received over $109,000 in new pledges and gifts. These new contributions ensure that the RCC Foundation will continue to provide financial assistance to help fulfill the College's mission and to enable students to achieve their educational dreams.

On behalf of the RCC Foundation Board of Directors, I would like to thank all of our donors, past and present. You are the reason we are able to provide a margin of excellence for Randolph Community College. This Report to the Community recognizes 2007-2008 donors, as well as those who have reached a cumulative giving level of at least $3,000. Your recognition here is just a small token of our gratitude.

Brenda Lopez

An Associate in Arts (College Transfer) major at RCC, Brenda graduated from Southwestern Randolph High School, where she took AP English, literature and environmental classes and was a Top Cat. Originally from Mexico, she was coordinator of the Hispanic Youth and Young Adult Ministry for four years for her church and works at Woodforest National Bank. Brenda is a member of Phi Theta Kappa honor society at RCC. She plans to transfer to a four-year university, obtain a bachelor's degree in biology, and then apply to dental school. Her long-term goal is to become a pediatric dentist.

Jennifer Priddy

A graduate of Rockingham County High School, Jennifer earned an associate degree from Rockingham Community College and took classes at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro before entering Randolph Community College's Photographic Technology program. She most recently worked for Pier 1 Imports (Kids Division) where she was visual merchandiser for the eastern region. While with Pier 1, Jennifer became involved in Habitat for Humanity in Washington, D.C. Her future plans include opening a photography studio.

Kristopher Tarot

An aspiring writer who graduated from Asheboro High School, Kristopher is in the Associate in Arts (College Transfer) program at RCC and plans to transfer to UNCG and major in English or psychology. He is currently a member of the 4-H advisory board, which oversees how the organization is doing as a whole. An A and A/B Honor Roll student throughout school, Kristopher illustrated a children's story in 2002. He has modeled for freelance photographer Robin Forbes and also works at Video Spectrum. He was recently elected as RCC's Student Government Association president. His future plans include writing several novels.

The Foundation Ambassadors acted as graduation marshals.

Brenda Lopez spoke of her educational experience at RCC during the Foundation's 2008 Scholarship Auction & Gala Dinner.

The RCC Foundation raised over $9,500 for curriculum scholarships at its 2008 Scholarship Auction & Gala Dinner. Forty photographers entered 121 photos in this year's contest. Gala participants, above, enjoyed viewing and bidding on framed enlargements of the winning photographs.

College Innovation Fund Grants

The RCC Foundation offers College Innovation Fund grants to encourage faculty, staff, and students to develop and implement innovative projects that will improve the quality and/or quantity of programs and services at Randolph Community College. Grant awards from the College Innovation Fund are given for projects that benefit the College and involve costs that are beyond the College's operational budget. Projects funded in 2007-2008 are described below.

$1,500 Moodle Users Group

Debbie Kennedy, director of distance education, submitted this successful grant to provide a stipend to RCC faculty who are developing distance education courses in Moodle. The North Carolina Community College System has been exploring options for distance education courses and selected RCC to participate in a trial of this free, open source content management system. If, after the trial, Moodle is deemed acceptable for distance education courses it will save colleges $19,000 or more per year. For the trial, five RCC instructors volunteered to attend training and develop courses for Moodle. If Moodle is adopted by the system office, RCC will be in the forefront of distance education delivery for the entire system. The grant provides a stipend of $300 each for the five instructors developing these courses.

$2,500 Public Safety Day Camp

This grant that was submitted by Ken Fields, director of emergency services programs, provides funding for a weeklong day camp for middle school-age students to introduce them to public safety careers. As the population grows in Randolph County and the demographics change, there is an ever-increasing need for well-trained emergency medical technicians, fire fighters, law enforcement officers, and 9-1-1 telecommunicators. This day camp will expose campers to various aspects and disciplines of Emergency Services in the county and the programs offered at RCC. The grant includes funding to publicize the camp, for stipends for counselors, and for supplies. The camp is being planned for the summer of 2009.

$3,300 Student Leadership Academy

Susan Milner, executive director of institutional advancement, submitted this successful proposal for the Student Leadership Academy. The grant provided funds to offset costs for this one-day intensive leadership workshop for RCC students, including speakers, food, portfolio reviewers, etc. Fourteen students were chosen through a competitive application process to attend the College's first Student Leadership Academy in the spring of 2008.

$2,500 Performing Arts Series

This successful proposal from Lori Shoenfeld, student activities coordinator, is providing funds for a performing arts series on campus for students and the community. A committee of faculty and staff saw a need to provide cultural experiences for RCC students and to provide events to bring the community to RCC's campus. This grant provides funding for groups or individuals to bring these experiences to RCC. The performing arts series enriches the social aspect of student life and provides an opportunity for students and the community to hear and appreciate live, local music and other performing artists.

Randolph Community College Photographic Technology students (clockwise from front) Alexa Dunkleberger, Jonathan Andrews, Carolyn deBerry, and Dustin Pressley in the RCC booth at the PhotoExpo at the Jacob Javits Convention Center in New York City. RCC's booth was among the many hundreds that were available for the more than 27,000 attendees during the three-day conference and trade show held in October 2007. Six RCC students went through an application and interview process to represent RCC at the trade show. Their trip was funded by the RCC Foundation Photography Challenge Fund. Three instructors and several other students also attended.

Photography Department Chair Greg Stewart said attending the PhotoExpo accomplished several objectives, including seeing many RCC photography graduates who work in the New York area or attend the show, meeting potential students (one student who learned about RCC at the show is enrolled this year), and establishing relationships and reconnecting with people who provide internships for the students as well as permanent employment opportunities for RCC's graduates.

The JB Davis Bell and Clock Tower has become an icon for Randolph Community College and the RCC Foundation.
